As health becomes more complex due to its association with numerous factors, Thailand’s health situations and trends require a wider range of analyses and syntheses of changes in individual and environmental factors of all dimensions that determine health problems as well as the health services system (Figure 4.1).

Figure 4.1 Linkage and dynamics of factors related to health